At Ambassador Platzler's request, Mr. Stone briefed him on the talks that occurred on November 29 and 30 between Soviet First Deputy Premier Mikoyan, the President and the Secretary. Drawing on selected parts of uncleared memcons, Mr. Stone told the Ambassador that Mikoyan's talk with the President of November 29 lasted three hours and twenty minutes, but about half of that time was required by the interpreters. The discussion was devoted almost entirely to Cuba and most of it concerned what had happened.

The only other subject discussed was Laos. The President said that there was evidence that the USSR was not living up to its agreement to withdraw its troops from Laos. Mikoyan replied that the USSR was in fact living up to its agreement.

On November 30, Mikoyan and the Secretary attended a working luncheon which lasted about two hours, Mr. Stone continued. Four topics were discussed: the Brazilian atomic free zone proposal, measures against surprise attack, nuclear test ban, and Berlin. Most of the discussion concerned Berlin. The Secretary stressed that the U.S. itself had vital interests at stake in Berlin and that it was extremely important that the Berlin problem be handled in such a way that it not lead to a crisis.

Ambassador Platzler thanked Mr. Stone for the briefing, which he said he found interesting and helpful.

The Cuban Missile Crisis Revisited: An International Collection of Documents, from the Bay of Pigs to the Brink of Nuclear War reproduces a comprehensive collection of records from the archives of the three key governments involved in the most dangerous confrontation of the Cold war. Declassified records from the United States, Russia and Cuba significantly advance analysis of the historical foundations of the missile crisis, the policy calculations and considerations of President John F. Kennedy and premiers Nikita Khrushchev and Fidel Castro, and the overt and covert military and paramilitary operations that combined to bring the world to the threshold of a nuclear exchange. Topics extensively covered in the documentation include the failed U.S.-led invasion at the Bay of Pigs, renewed attempts to overthrow Castro through Operation Mongoose and Operation Northwoods, U.S. military contingency planning for conflict with Cuba, naval warfare, Soviet and Cuban decision making and communications during the crisis, and the repercussions for U.S.-Soviet relations, and Soviet-Cuban relations in its aftermath. Materials were identified, obtained, assembled and indexed by the National Security Archive, a non-profit Washington D.C. based research institute and library. The microfiche collection is accompanied by a printed guide and index.
